

Dear FCC,

It is your responsibility and mandate to serve the best interest of the American public when making decisions. In no way does this rule change benefit the American public, rather it benefits a few media conglomerates, while endangering the concept of a free press by allowing only a few to control what the masses read, see and hear.

You're potentially disabling an essential American check and balance if you allow only a few wealthy conglomerates to control so much of what the public consumes. By making this rule change, you are making it obvious that you have no interest in serving the public and only interest in getting more soft money for the Administration. This may make you a great party man and will probably ensure a nice job when you leave the government, but it also makes you a horribly un-American sell out. Although the choice should be ours (the American public's, that is), the choice is yours. God help us all if you make this proposed rule change.
